

The Second Battalion of the Ninth Coast Guard gave New York City an exhibition of how they would handle a riot in the streets. This photo shows them in hollow square formation ready for anything. Machine gunners deployed in front of the square control the street, while troopers with levelled rifles back them up. The soldiers on the side of the square are covering the windows.

© Underwood & Underwood.