

...was built to suit the...
 here's the Horse and ^{made it all up & humbled} _{not belie}
 Suffragets' Vote Wagon

IN THE EX-R.F.D. WAGON

THE HORSE THEY HUNTED SO HARD FOR

IT'S HARD, BUT SUFFRAGETS GET
 HORSE FOR TRIP

Having at last got a horse, after being turned down twice by liverymen because they were suffragets, two valiant militants from New York, Miss Rosalind Jones and Miss Elizabeth Freeman started from Cleveland bright and early Wednesday on a vote-hunting tour through the highways and byways of Ohio.

They left in a peculiar-appearing contraption, which, formerly a rural free delivery wagon, has been made suitable for suffrage campaigning by a liberal application of yellow and black paint. The black paint had been used to inscribe sentences and war-cry calling upon all and sundry either to be conquered or assist in conquering in the battle for the ballot.

"We visited a dozen stables," said Miss Jones, smiling cheerily. "But we at last got one for $85 and called her 'Suffraget'."

J. B. Perkins, 40 Blackstone building, figured in the horse deal. Perkins has a reputation as a judge of horseflesh, and Miss Jones took him with her.

Perkins is an anti-suffraget, and at the first stable visited he casually mentioned that Miss Jones was a suffraget.

"She is, eh" said the liveryman. "Then, she don't get a hoss here. I don't sell hosses at bargain prices to suffragets."

The same experience at the next livery stable. They later omitted all mention of suffragism, but it was not until the eleventh livery stable had been visited, that of George Bell, Prospect avenue, that the $85 was paid over.

"We are going to pay particular attention to the places where suffragets have not been before," said Miss Freeman, as the trip began. "Yes, in the remote districts we may occasionally be greeted by a shower of turnips and cabbages. Such has been the lot of suffragets in England."

Miss Freeman came last September from England, where she spent six years fighting for the suffrage, being arrested seven times in disturbances.

The couple's first stop will be Medina, where they will spend the Fourth. Friday they will speak in Wadsworth and next week in Wooster.

Inside the wagon is a toy dog with only two legs remaining. "It is our mascot," said Miss Jones. A label is attached to the dog reading: "I'm waggin' for 'em."

AT DINNER.

Mrs. William Annat will entertain at dinner, this evening, Miss Rosalie Jones, of New York, and Miss Elizabeth Freeman, the two delightful young ladies who are here on their "Votes for Women" tour, and Dr. Thomas Shupe.

Cler
 Milita
 A
 "Yo
 crack
 up to smash
 we're
 The
 man, milita
 ters
 Free
 Rosa
 girl,
 nigh
 whic
 hors suffr
 "I
 rea
 thes
 cont
 fals
 Eng
 side
 "
 self
 abo
 liar
 for kee
 str
 Th ing
 w
 no
 TH in w co