

New York, October 9, 1911.

It is a great privilege to catch some of the verve and inspiration of Miss Freeman's high free spirit. Her knowledge of economic conditions, of political conditions and the completeness of which she is in touch with the world throb of progress toward democracy makes her a remarkable speaker. She is one of those few who not only inform the intellect but who lift up the heart and have the capacity to transform belief into action and that is a qualification which is sorely needed in speakers to-day on all social questions.
